CORPORATE AMERICA AND ASTROLOGY

Who among us hasn't been to WalMart? My friend, Adano, used to say, "Let's go see Mr. Tramlaw." and we would pour out of his van after a long night's drive and see what was up for sale that day. How many of Adano's friends were gifted a videotape player that he had bought at Walmart is anybody's guess. And how did this particular discount store get to be the number one retailer with such a bad reputation? And what about Enron. How did the darling of the stock market become so disreputable? Or Microsoft, where does the power come from in spite of being the software company that people love to hate. Why was Boeing's CEO compelled to step down for a non-business related peccadillo? And then there's all the trouble for CocaCola, HP, Tyco and the list goes on and on. What's happening?

Corporations are entities, too, just like you and me. In fact, you can cast an astrological chart for anything that has a beginning: the birth of your cat, the purchase of your car, your wedding, the start of a business. When a chart is cast for a non-living entity it is called an event chart, and tells us what to expect in the 'life' of that entity. The trick, of course, and there's always a trick, is to know when to cast the initial chart. For most of the businesses mentioned above we will be using incorporation dates to find the evidence we are looking for but in the case of WalMart we will use the opening of the first store by Sam and Bud Walton in Roger, Arkansas. The opening date is quite remarkable and leads one to think that perhaps there was some astrological advice in hand.

But to find out why there is this trend in corruption and greed in business, one really has to look at the chart of the United States. I use the Yorktown Treaty as the birth of the nation as opposed to the event chart of the signing of the declaration since a country is comprised of individuals. That is, the population defines the country, as opposed to an event chart of a corporation where the business defines the work force. And this is an important distinction. If we are going to use the 'Treaty' chart of birth then we can take some responsibility for correcting what we perceive to be wrongs. And a cursory look at the chart shows that Pluto, the planet of transformation, corruption, destiny, and driving ambition is currently transiting through the 10th house of business, bosses (read CEOs), government and political party in power, national reputation and personal status. All of these classifications are existing hot topics in the news today. Na-

SUMMER CALENDAR

The Summer Solstice find us with the 3 outer planets, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto, retrograde as they will remain throughout this quarter. These are transpersonal planets and they tend to set trends. When all 3 are retrograde there probably won't be anything happening that is earthshakingly surprising as we mull over what's happening now. There are two planetary areas of note, however.

The first is that Saturn will be moving into a new constellation. On July 16 Saturn leaves Cancer and goes into Leo. That is good news! Saturn in Cancer is at its Fall, its most uncomfortable, even malefic place. At least in Leo, the coldness of Saturn is warmed by the fire of Leo. In the U.S. chart Saturn changes signs in the 6th house where issues of work, armed forces and health of the nation are concerned. We might see some corrections in the army or other services that were brought to light by Saturn in Cancer. Health insurance will continue to rear its ugly head with no solution coming anytime soon. In August Saturn will make its first opposition to the U.S. Pluto in the 12th house. This is a difficult transit and often indicates self destructive energy. Since Saturn in the US 'natal' chart's 10th house ruling presidents, CEOs and generals, we might expect some newsworthy information then. I had mentioned in the last issue of L.C. that the spring ingress chart indicated some problems for the President. As it turned out it would seem that his loss of prestige and popularity is a result of his unsuccessful bid to change the social security system.

On the personal level Saturn here can bring about a sense of reliability, even cautiousness, and may put a damper on social matters. It could bring about a creative block, and responsibilities toward children to the fore. Although Saturn will spend 2.5 years in Leo, sometimes people feel at the beginning all the transits it will make throughout its trip.

The other interesting planetary movement is due to Mars. Mars is currently in Aries, his home. Here we find natural flowing energy, ambition, independence; or unchecked zeal and impatience for example. But on July 29, Mars enters Taurus where it will remain throughout the year. Mars usually only spends 2 months in a sign, as it takes approximately 2 years to move through the entire zodiac. But every 2 years Mars retrogrades --as it will in October. So it's worthwhile to become familiar with this energy. Mars in Taurus brings endurance and a slow and plodding determination --but for what? Work? Possessions? One's own way? Obstinacy? It's your choice. And of course it matters where Mars is located in your personal chart. That area will be markedly important for you for the next year, for it is where you will put your energy.

Also, to remind you, Jupiter went direct earlier this month and will remain in Libra through the summer. Jupiter will move into Scorpio in October. Jupiter is the planet of expansion, positive self-esteem and confidence. It's the 'lucky' planet and being in Libra is excellent for self-promotion, public relations and working together in teams. It's currently transiting the U.S. 9th house where it is probably responsible for keeping our monetary policies crazy, but it can be positive, hopefully bringing us some fiscal responsibility!

"The physical body is contained within the framework of time. When we recognize that the whole world is held by Mara (Maya, illusion), we realize that our physical condition, too, is nothing but our own projection."

tally, Pluto can be found in the U.S. chart in the 12th house where issues of enemies against the corporation, secret dealings, and labor union problems are found. One just has to read the headlines on Google or the NYTimes to get daily information on these situations. The 10th house, where Pluto is now, is a public house, so corrupt or greedy practices are coming to our attention. To add to the intensity, Saturn has been transiting through the 6th house of the worker, who is feeling stressed and agitated by the immensely inequitable pay scale. Saturn in the 6th house also defines the problem in servicing products that is found in most companies. Outsourcing service to foreign countries fails to satisfy the customer, although it pleases the stockholder who sees this trend as saving money, which increases the value of the stock and adds to the value of one's portfolio.

As I said, we, as individuals, can do something to make a correction, but it isn't easy. We would need to realign our sense of values away from so much materialism toward more humanistic considerations and put those values into the way we live our daily lives. It would seem that sometime around 2008-2010 we will be forced to make some changes that will alter our lifestyles when Pluto moves into the sign of Capricorn and opposes Uranus.

Now let's look at some of these controversial companies, beginning with WalMart. Since the most interesting chart is the Opening of the First Store, take a look at the grand trine between Jupiter, Neptune and the Sun. Some astrologers attribute free enterprise to Chiron, so if you add that into the mix there is every reason to conclude that this store would succeed and rather quickly—which it did. But also look at the opposition between Jupiter and Pluto. This is the clue to the full impact that WalMart has made. Pluto is the fascist, wanting power and control, and when inflated by Jupiter produces the possibility of megalomania, of never being satisfied. WalMart is now the single biggest retailer in the world! —which some say is at the expense of its workers, and which now largely sells products from China

Now for a look at Enron. Using the Re-incorporation chart, we see a very difficult T-square involving Jupiter, Saturn, the Nodes, and Chiron. This indicates problems in doing business, following the rules, utilizing free enterprise. Then we find an opposition between the Sun and Neptune indicating inflated promises and/or lies by the head of the company, and finally, a Saturn trine Mercury: unchecked communications. Enron was brought down when Pluto squared its Midheaven and Neptune opposed Mercury and exposed the lies.

For the last example, please look at the chart of Microsoft's launch date. You will see that there are 6 planets around 22°--Sun and Mercury are in close trine to Neptune and sextiling Pluto, while Chiron trines Venus and inconjuncts Neptune. These are good business aspects and especially intense with so many planets that are affected simultaneously by transiting planets. The bad news is that anytime a difficult transiting planet hits those numbers Microsoft goes through a difficult period. Looking at Saturn transits beginning in June, 1990, when the FTC first launched its probe into Microsoft and consistently since, Saturn at plus or minus 22° in any sign has been problematic over the years. When 6 of your energies are affected simultaneously by a malefic it's no wonder that Microsoft comes under such scrutiny. More about corporations on my blog: www.lcircuit.com Check it out.
